MISCELLANEOUS READING.

A REMARKABLE LIFE A late number of the New Orleans Cirs. tian Advocate contains an interesting sketch of aman, who came in boyhood from Scotland to Galveston Island; studied law; bccame a successful practitioner; served in the war against the Mexicans and Indians, as a comrade of Samuel Walker and Addison Gille-pie; was taken prisoner by the Mexicans and narrowly escaped perishing; became a leader of the public affairs of his State, while at the same time be was an active "exhorter" in the Methodist Church; and finally, in the year 1857, was generally designated in all parts of the State as it e first choice of his party to succeed General Houston in the Senate of the United States. During all this time, he had frequently felt it his HRISTMAS AND NEW YEARS .- Fancy duty to enter the ministry, but was restrained from doing so, chiefly by the opposition of his wife, who although "an excellent and pious lady," had no fancy for the life of an itinerant preacher's wife. Finally, the crisis in his history arrived, when he was on the eve of being -ent to the Senate. We copy the dramatic account of what followed, as given by the Advocate: Taking the letters and papers from all parts of the State, giving him assurance of election, he went to his wife, and said: "I can go to the United States Senate. Here is the evidence. If you wish it, I will go . But if I go, bell is my doom. I shall die a drunkard as certain as I go to Washington. I can yet escape. If I pass this point, I never can. I can enter the ministry, which Knives and Forks, together with an endless va- I ought to have done long ago, and save myriety of promiscuous Toys and Fancy articles self from a drunkard's grave, my soul from for children. Call early and have your choice. hell. But you shall decide." His poor wife, unwilling to relinquish the glittering prize in view, replied, weaping, that she could not see why he could not be a great man and a Christian too.

But after prayerful reflection, she would not incur the fearful responsibility of deciding against his conscience, and told him to go into the itinerancy, and she would go with him. To the astonishment of the whole State, a letter from him appeared in the papers, just before the meeting of the Legislature, declining the nomination, and announcing his retirement from political life. The next thing that was heard of him was that he was

The Editor (who vouches for the truth of the narrative) says that the hopes entertained of his success as a preacher have been more than realized. It adds --

"What renders the case more remarkable. is the fact, that before he declined the United States Senatorship, by a legacy left him in England, he became possessed of an ample fortune. Wealth, and the hope of high position, have kept many out of the itinerancy; but few, very few, are those who have declined eminent earthly advantages for it, or rather, brought them as additional forces into it that they might be the more largely useful."

No name is given in the narrative, but we presume that those familiar with the political history of Texas will have no difficulty in fill-
